2015 in Review

Dear Primate Friend,

The International Union for Conservation of Nature, of which IPPL is a member, declared 2015 “The Year of the Gibbon.” The focus was on these little apes and recognizing their plight. For us, every year is “The Year of the Gibbon.”

Thanks to the support of our generous donors, IPPL has always been ready to offer a permanent home to a gibbon in need. This year we welcomed retired zoo gibbon, Mia, to IPPL. She had been living alone after her mate passed away. Mia had not been a very good mother to her babies and it is IPPL’s policy not to breed gibbons, so it was a perfect match.

As 2015 was coming to an end, we started to prepare for our next arrival, Dorothy, another retired zoo gibbon, who arrived in early 2016.

Along with providing the best possible care for our gibbons, IPPL is always ready to provide support to primates in need around the world, whether it be financially or a strong voice. After compiling the 2014 U.S. Primate Trade Statistics, we sadly reported a 20% increase in imports into the United States.

We immediately asked our supporters to protest the export of crab-eating macaques from the beautiful island of Mauritius. Another petition IPPL strongly supported was the petition to upgrade chimps to “Fully Endangered” on the U.S. Endangered Species List, which would help protect chimpanzees from laboratories and the pet trade.

IPPL has been fighting hard for the protection of primates since 1973, and it was a great joy that I was able to meet with Austrian representatives Josef and Maya Schmuck, and visit the chimpanzees formerly owned by the Austrian drug company, Immuno. The lawsuit filed by Immuno against myself and others made First Amendment history in the 1980’s. The chimps now live in excellent conditions at the Gut Alderbiichl Sanctuary for Traumatized Chimpanzees under the care of Renate Foidl and her team.

The Centre for Animal Rehabilitation and Education (C.A.R.E.) in South Africa has struggled to rebuild and care for almost 500 baboons since its founder was killed in a tragic fire. We learned in August that their food storage room was in a shambles, due to marauding elephants, and desperately needed to be replaced. IPPL immediately asked our supporters for help and we surpassed our $7,500 goal!

Our work didn’t stop there. Through our small grant program, IPPL offered support to many primate sanctuaries:

In Africa:
- Cameroon: In Defense of Animals – Africa: to send a conservation educator to rural schools.
- Democratic Republic of Congo: J.A.C.K.: to build an extra chimp nursery.
- Equatorial Guinea: Bioko Biodiversity Protection Program: to protect island monkeys via forest patrols.
- Guinea: Project Primate/Chimpanzee Conservation Center: to rescue injured chimpanzees.
- Malawi: Lilongwe Wildlife Trust: to rehab/release yellow baboons.
- Morocco: Barbary Macaque Awareness & Conservation: to perform Barbary macaque conservation education.
- Nigeria: Pan-drillus (Drill Ranch): to operate a drill monkey conservation center.
- Sierra Leone: Tacugama Chimpanzee Sanctuary: emergency funding during the Ebola crisis.
- South Africa: The Centre for Animal Rehabilitation and Education (C.A.R.E.): to perform baboon rehabilitation/releases.

In Asia:
- India: SVAA/HURO Programme: to rescue western hoolock gibbons.
- Indonesia: Jakarta Animal Aid Net-work: to campaign against selling primates.
- Kalaweit: to care for rescued gibbons.
- Little Fireface Project: to conduct slow loris conservation.
- ProFauna Indonesia: to protect orangutans in East Borneo.
- Nepal: Wildlife Watch Group: to create a wildlife sanctuary for native monkeys.
- Singapore: ACRES: to reduce monkey-human conflict.
- Thailand: Highland Farm: to operate a remote primate sanctuary.
- Wildlife Friends Foundation of Thailand (WFFT): to care for rescued gibbons and macaques.

In South America:
- Bolivia: Comunidad Inti Wara Yaski: to microchip rescued monkeys.
- Chile: Centro do Rescate y Rehabilitación de Primates: to build special facilities for elderly rescued monkeys.
- Ecuador: Sumak Allpa: to rehabilitate native monkeys on an island sanctuary.
- Peru: Neotropical Primate Conservation: to perform community-based protection of yellow-tailed woolly monkeys.

Gratefully,

Dr. Shirley McGreal OBE
Founder and Executive Director
